Symposium Speaker Highlights

- Dillon Feuz, Ph.D. (Economist, Utah State University) will start off the Symposium by speaking about the "big picture" of alfalfa economics.
- Dan Undersander, Ph.D. (Forage Agronomist, University of Wisconsin) will talk about collecting consistent samples and getting the prices you deserve.
- Pete Reisen, Ph.D. (Forage Genetics) will give us an update on Roundup Ready alfalfa.
- Scott McKendrick, (Equine Specialist, Utah State University) will remind us what horses like to eat and what buyers look for in quality feed.
- Tom Bailey, Bailey Farms International will share his success story, and talk about the BFI hay compression operation.
- An open panel discussion featuring growers. This is your chance to ask questions and engage in dialogue.
- Three breakout sessions for more focused information. Breakout topics include: fertilizer management, crop rotation options and issues, and variety research updates.
- Many other speakers who are focused on hay and forage production in the Intermountain West. For complete program details, visit www.utahhay.usu.edu.

More than just speakers...

- The Trade Show Exhibition gives you a hands-on opportunity to see new and improved products and technology available on the market. The Symposium will have more than 25 industry booths for you to visit this year!
- The Trade Show Exhibition will also feature several educational and safety displays ready to answer your questions.
- Test your hay judging skills with a fun exercise - prizes go to the top contestants!
- More than $1000 in door prizes given away throughout the Symposium.
- Take home practical information you can use next year while gaining valuable CEU's.
- The Utah Bankers Association will be having a concurrent meeting in St. George. Visit their website to learn more (www.uba.org) or contact Dorene Cheney (801.328.8124, dcheney@uba.org) about attending the banquet dinner on Thursday, January 29.
